Dream a little dream with me

Editorial by Maggie Thompson

With so many cool comics out there right now — and so many more announced — what are your dreams? What, after 66 years, do you yearn for in our sequential-art, drawn-books format that you have yet to see?

Let me hit you with a couple of thoughts:

• Alan Moore recently wrote in WildStorm titles of his fun growing up with comic books — and his desire to produce the best of the kinds of comics he used to love.

So what Alan Moore haven't we seen? How about a drop-dead-wonderful little kids' funny-animal comic book? We've seen him produce some of the best material (including a funny animal) not intended for 6-year-olds. But what would he do for beginning readers?

Wouldn't you like to see it?

• Speaking of comics for kids, wouldn't you like to have Sheldon Mayer's classic Sugar & Spike for today's kids? But let's keep that price down, expand the scope, and maintain it as a backlist item. How about a Sugar & Spike Story & Activity Book? First three issues of S&S in black-and-white on slightly heavier paper — with a cardstock cover providing paper dolls to cut out. Kids can read. Kids can play. Kids can color. And collectors can laugh their butts off.

• And even more comics for kids: Someone striking a deal with Golden (now in reorganization) to pick and choose from its classic inventory of fairy-tale and other fantasies. Come on, wouldn't it be terrific to give a Christmas present consisting of '40s Santa Claus stories drawn by Mo Gollub and Walt Kelly and Dan Noonan? "How Santa Got His Red Suit" is a classic. And, moving away from Christmas, how about a collection of Fairy Tale Parade stories? (Tip for folks in entertainment industries: Many of these could be storyboards for terrific movies.)

• Speaking of reprints (as I seem to be doing — sorry; I'll return to new projects in a moment), how about a trade paperback of tastefully yucky horror stories for adults? With the "tasteful" element in mind, the number might be limited, but the idea came to me because of a magic moment at this year's Chicago con. A fan approached the table with a question he thought I might be able to answer: Could I help him find a comics horror story he'd read as a child but never found since? It had to do with a creature in the sewer —

" — and it sucked out people's insides and left their dry skin husks behind?" I replied eagerly. He was tickled. After a couple more questions and answers, I knew I had the answer to his search: probably the most vividly remembered horror story ever published in comics: John Stanley's opening story in the first issue of Ghost Stories (Sep-Nov 62) from Dell.

By convention's end, the fan happily returned to the table, bearing the trophy which he'd managed to locate after more than a decade's search. I love this kind of collector story — but isn't such a memorable tale worthy of republication?

• I know I'm a fine one to talk, but there's a reference work that'd be neat to have that I'm pretty sure we won't publish here. And, in fact, it would probably present legal problems (though it would be fair use). But —

Wouldn't it be neat to have a book that features one sample strip from every American newspaper strip that ever ran — with a brief note about the syndicate, the creators involved, and the dates it ran? Maurice Horn's Chelsea House tome The World Encyclopedia of Comics is a start — but I'm talking everything here!

Years ago, we did run a list of strips in CBG. Compiled by Paul Leiffer and Hames Ware, it ran in #545, 546, 571, 573, 594, and #638-665. The last installment ran Aug. 15, 1986, and the entries provided the title, the original byline, syndicate, start/end dates, and years it was listed in Editor & Publisher. But wouldn't it be keen to have it in one volume — with a sample of each strip?

Dreams, dreams ...

On the cover

In 1974, The Punisher was introduced to the Marvel universe in the pages of Amazing Spider-Man #129. For the next several years, he popped up from time to time in several Marvel titles, gaining fans with each new appearance. The '80s and '90s saw Frank Castle with three ongoing titles and numerous guest appearances and specials. Now, with 25 years of activity behind him, the guy with a gun looks back at his career with the help of Matt Brady.

Major changes in store for Man of Steel and Dark Knight

By Matt Brady and Michael Doran

Confirming rumors regarding Superman's city, Superman Editor Eddie Berganza confirmed at Wizard World that Metropolis itself will be getting a futuristic new 'do for the new millennium, designed by Stuart Immonen (Adventures of Superman). "One of Superman's oldest foes as well as one of his newest enemies is behind it," Berganza said. "How closely they're related will be the mystery that Superman will have to see to believe."

While he declined to comment directly, Berganza suggested that Metropolis' new look would be something taken out of the future, with buildings that reach to the clouds. The appearance of the new cityscape will be somewhat of a mystery that will prompt S.T.A.R. Labs to move back into the city to investigate.

Berganza also confirmed that Lois, Jimmy, Clark, and the rest of the cast would be back at work at the Daily Planet, slated to reopen in Superman #151. "We can't say how the Planet is able to reopen just yet, but, while it may look like a happy return on the surface, there may be sinister implications just underneath," he added. "Also, a supporting character from another hero's world will be involved in the Planet re-opening. It shouldn't be all that hard to figure out just who that is."

Berganza also revealed that Luthor will be getting two new, female bodyguards: Mercy and Hope. "We're keeping their identities under wraps for now," Berganza said. "But they may have pretty strong ties to another region of the DCU — or they may not."

Bat-changes on tap, as well. DC has been hinting at major changes to its Bat-franchise next year as early as the 1998 summer con season, and they chose this year's Wizard World Chicago convention to announce the "reconstruction" of the Batman family following the conclusion of the year-long "No Man's Land" event.

According to Associate Editor Joe Illidge, January will serve as "Relaunch Month," a month in which each title in the Bat family will feature a one-issue story that "re-establishes the title's mythos and sets up the new status quo," as well as introducing new or shuffled creative teams.

Core Batman titles will see the most changes, with each series returning to a stand-alone format, each with a unique narrative identity with its own regular creative teams.

• Detective Comics, focusing on crime in Gotham and Batman's interaction with the GCPD and Commissioner Gordon with a "film noir slant," will be written by Greg Rucka with art by Shawn Martinbrough. According to Rucka, talks are ongoing in the Bat offices to increase Detective Comics to 30 or 40 pages a month to include serial adventures in the last eight pages, much like what was done with the series in the late '80s.

• Batman, focusing on the super-heroic aspects of the Dark Knight, will be written by Larry Hama and illustrated by current Nightwing penciller Scott McDaniel and Karl Story.

• Batman: Shadow of the Bat will be canceled with the conclusion to "No Man's Land" and replaced with a new series, Batman: Gotham Knights, written by Devin Grayson with art by Dale Eaglesham and John Floyd. According to Grayson, the series will examine the juxtaposition between Batman being a loner and having a large, familial, supporting cast around him. "I like to call it 'Batman Family 2000' just to make Denny O'Neil nervous," joked Grayson. "But it's more properly an examination of the inner workings of Batman's mind, especially as demonstrated through his relationships with his supporting cast and other (mostly street-level) inhabitants of Gotham City and the DC universe."

• Batman: Legends of the Dark Knight will return to its original format of rotating creative teams telling multi-part stories, with Bob Schreck pulling editorial duties.

And the changes don't stop there. Batman and Gotham City are also slated for major alternations in 2000. "There will be new rules and new changes," said Illidge. "Batman will get a new costume: one that will serve as his definitive costume for some time. We're also going to amp up his technology, and readers will be seeing a new Batcave, a new Wayne Manor, and a new Batmobile."

And, like Metropolis, Gotham City will get a facelift. While not revealing the hows and whys — that's what the last half of "No Man's Land" is for — Illidge did confirm that Gotham will be rebuilt in January — and rebuilt in a "quick and flamboyant" manner. "The city and its denizens have more of a relationship than you might think," said Illidge. "And New Gotham will take on looks very indicative of the people who influence affairs in the city."

The "new look" Gotham will be divided into three main districts, each having its own distinct look and feel that will complement one of the three core Bat-titles and make each series easily distinguishable from one another, not only in story content, but visually, as well.

• Detective Comics will be set in a district featuring architecture in the vein of Anton Furst's visual designs from the Batman films, "but pushed a little bit further" said Illidge.

• Batman, the "mainstream superhero" title of the three, will take place in a modern metropolitan corporate Mecca of fresh, gleaming towers of glass and steel.

• Batman: Gotham Knights will be set in a down-to-earth, urban district with a slight element of the gothic.

And, while the satellite Bat-titles won't see the profound changes the core titles will, each will sport creative shuffling come January.

The new teams are as follows:

Nightwing: Chuck Dixon (writer), Greg Land (penciller), Drew Geraci (inker).

Birds of Prey: Dixon (writer), Jackson Guice (artist).

Robin: Dixon (writer), Pete Woods (penciller), Jesse Delperdang (inker).

Catwoman: Bronwyn Carlton (writer), Staz Johnson (penciller), Wayne Faucher (inker).

Get free Internet space from Stan Lee Media and Warner Bros.

Lee

A World Wide Web home page "land rush" will kick off the Stan-Lee.AcmeCity launch at this year's Comic-Con International: San Diego. Stan Lee Media and Warner Bros. Online are launching the site (www.stanlee.acmecity.com) with a free home-page giveaway. The two companies plan to "reach out to a global audience of young people to establish the broadest online community of super-hero, science-fiction, and fantasy fans ever assembled on the Internet."

"I plan to duplicate on the Internet what I did for comic-book publishing originally, that is to build a global audience of new young comic-book and super-hero fans," said Lee, chairman and chief creative officer of Stan Lee Media. "Teaming with Warner Bros.' AcmeCity community enables us to give every fan connected to the World Wide Web the biggest free home page, along with lifetime e-mail and chat options, to create the greatest global community of fans ever assembled in the history of comicdom."

The San Diego event will offer on-site registration for free 20-megabyte web pages. The pages will come with all associated free services such as e-mail, chat rooms, and message boards.

Lee added, "Other communities are giving away the equivalent of condos on the Internet — at 20 megabytes, we're giving away 'super-hero cybermansions.'"

The Warner Bros. Online site has seen tremendous growth in the past six months, increasing its size by almost 50%, according to number from Media Matrix. Its AcmeCity site currently has more than 400,000 members. Plans call for the new StanLee.AcmeCity site to encourage other independent community sites on the Internet to join the new site.

Dini's Jingle Belle. Christmas is coming a month early this year for fans of Entertainment Weekly's "It" television writer Paul Dini, courtesy of Oni Press. Dini's first ever creator-owned series, a two-issue series entitled Jingle Belle, is set to debut this November. Illustrated by artist Stephen DeStefano ('Mazing Man) , the series stars Santa Claus' teen-age daughter, an original creation of Dini, who makes her debut in this month's special all-Paul Dini Oni Double Feature.

"Virtually everyone born in the age of television has grown up with animated holiday specials featuring characters like Charlie Brown, Rudolph, The Grinch, and many others," Dini explained. "Jingle Belle is intended to be both a spoof and homage to that genre. It's a Christmas story for readers, who, like Jing herself, have become disenchanted with the holiday hype and ritual. Christmas is no large charge for Jing. Old man Kringle is stricter with his rebellious daughter than he is with any other kid, and Jing is routinely banished to the naughty list for minor infractions. This sends Jing on a personal mission to prove her worth to Santa, and she just might torpedo the whole holiday season to do it. It's a story fraught with high drama, low humor, rampaging snow demons, farting musk oxen, and legions of angry little kids. In other words, everything that makes Christmas magical, at least around my house."

Bill Morrison provides the cover, and the limited series will also feature pin-ups by the likes of Jill Thompson and Alex Ross.

Morrison and Ennis move to 'Marvel Knights'

By Matt Brady

Marvel Associate Manager Retail Sales Advertising and Promotion Bill Rosemann took the opportunity at Wizard World to both recap the previously announced "Marvel Knights" Year Two projects including Ant-Man's Big Christmas and a second Black Widow limited series and to announce that both Grant Morrison and Garth Ennis will write series for "Marvel Knights" during the second year of the Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti-helmed line.

The deals with Morrison and Ennis come as the two end their year-long exclusive contracts with DC, freeing them to work for any comics publisher.

Punishing Preacher's team. The first of the new "Marvel Knights" series will be a 12-issue Punisher series, written by Ennis and illustrated by his Preacher art partner Steve Dillon.

The series will be inked by Palmiotti and is scheduled to make its debut in January.

It's Ennis' is second time handling The Punisher (he also wrote The Punisher Kills the Marvel Universe in 1995), and he said he expects no trouble wrapping up Preacher with September 2000's #66 and beginning The Punisher, considering the significant overlap period during which he will be writing both series at the same time. "Preacher's storyline is nearly finished, and I've known how things were going to end for a while now," Ennis said. "It really shouldn't be any trouble at all to wrap up one while beginning the other. Plus The Punisher is paced like Preacher, so the tone of the writing will be very similar." Dillon will pencil both series for the nine-month overlap.

Ennis also said that, with the end of Preacher in sight and Hitman possibly coming to an end before too long, he's not too interested in re-signing anything exclusive for a while. "I'm considering taking some time off from comics and looking into film some more," Ennis said. "Once Punisher is finished, I'm not really interested in doing another monthly title. I'll do an occasional mini-series and special, but nothing ongoing again for a long while."

Morrison's Marvel Boy. Morrison's "Marvel Knights" series, Marvel Boy, is, according to Morrison, entirely appropriate. "If I was going to write a Marvel series, I surely wanted to have the word 'marvel' in the title," he said. "We're not talking about the Bill Everett character from the '50s here. This is a new guy: the most messed-up, vicious, crazy superhero you'll ever see. He comes to Earth to change everything about us. He thinks we're just totally full of it about everything and he's out to fix it all." Marvel Boy is tentatively slated to launch in mid-2000 with J.G. Jones attached as artist.

Waiting on Smith's Green Arrow. Ever since Kevin Smith told Entertainment Weekly last year that he would be writing a Green Arrow series for DC, loyal Green Arrow fans have waited in eager anticipation ...

And waited.

The only recent news regarding Smith's Green Arrow future was the statement the writer and filmmaker made earlier this year, explaining that the only artists he'd consider working with on the project were his Daredevil collaborators Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti.

That criterion was seemingly complicated just a few months later when Quesada and Palmiotti re-upped for a second year of "Marvel Knights," a move that would preclude them from tackling another major project for at least another year.

Treasured sketchbook lost in Dallas

Comics dealer Robert Beerbohm has reported that an art book that he has been filling with comics pros' sketches for more than 25 years was lost during his attendance at Don Maris' Big D Show in Dallas, Texas, July 9-11.

"When I got home I looked for it, as I was going to pull a couple illustrations from it to use in my first contribution to CAPA-Alpha. It wasn't in any of the boxes. Nothing else seems to be missing."

Beerbohm described the book as a black 8 1/2" x 11" hardcover, "a typical artist sketch book. The outside spine binding has had several layers of 2" wide clear plastic mailing tape applied to it over the years to keep it from falling apart — very distinctive. There are only a dozen or so pages left to fill out of a couple hundred.

"It does not have a 'Property of ...' in it," Beerbohm said, but "most of the pages are dedicated to 'Robert,' 'Bob,' or 'Susan,' usually dated the day acquired. This is a very personalized personal journey of me being a fanboy of all the people listed."

Artists whose sketches appear in the book include: Neal Adams ("I am a comics fan!"), Brent Anderson, Sergio Aragonés (three sketches: a monkey cutting Tarzan's vine from 1974, a portrait of Bill Gaines with mobile, and a 1985 detailed pen and ink of Groo with background), Dick Ayers (Sgt. Fury), Carl Barks (Uncle Scrooge done in blue ballpoint pen), Bill Blackbeard, Vaughn Bodé (Cheech Wizard), Ray Bradbury (full-page drawing), Roger Brand, John Buscema, Bob Clampett (Porky Pig), Guy Colwell, Howard Cruse, Vince Davis, Kim Deitch, Mark Edmonds (dragon), Lora Fontaine, Bob Foster (Myron Moose), Stan Gross, Sherry Flenniken (Trots & Bonnie, 1974), Creig Flessell (Sandman), Justin Green (Binky Brown), Gary Hallgren (Tortoise & Hare), Rand Holmes (Elmo), Willie Ito (Mickey Mouse), Mike Kaluta, Bob Kane (Batman, 1978), Gil Kane, Jack Katz, Anton Kelly, Jay Kinney, Jack Kirby (Captain America), Denis Kitchen, Joe Kubert (Tarzan), Harvey Kurtzman (Annie Fanny), Steve Leialoha (two sketches), Larry Marder (Beanworld), George Metzger, Russell Meyers (Broom Hilda, 1974), Al Milgrom (indian with bow), Frank Miller (The Spirit, December 1981), Stanley Mouse, Alex Nino (two sketches), Dan O'Neill (hung Mickey Mouse, 1974), Jim Pinkowski, John Pound, Ted Richards, Terry Richards, Trina Robbins, Don Rico (Captain America), Marshall Rogers (Foozle), Ed Romero, Don Rosa (Uncle Scrooge), Alex Ross (Superman, the most recent sketch in the book, from June 1999), Shelby Sampson, Alex Schomburg (rocket ship), Scott Shaw! (1974 Super Sunday), Gilbert Shelton (Wonder Warthog), Bill Sienkiewicz (a sketch of a woman), Dave Sim and Gerhardt (Cerebus with a detailed cityscape in the background, done at Petuniacon), Bruce Simon, Don Simpson, Jim Starlin, Bill Stout, Terry Stroud, Bryan Talbot, Larry Todd, Len Wein (Hulk), Alan Weiss (a nude woman), S. Clay Wilson, and Bernie Wrightson (skull).

The book also contains a number of autographs from other creators, including: Milton Caniff, Will Eisner, Harlan Ellison, Bill Gaines (on the Aragonés sketch), Mark Evanier, Frank Frazetta, Burne Hogarth, Chuck Jones ("... and Associated Rabbits"), David A. Kyle, Arthur Lake, Stan Lee, Julius Schwartz, Louis Silberkleit, Joe Shuster, Dick Sprang, Jim Steranko, and Al Williamson.

Beerbohm is offering a no-questions-asked reward for the return of his book and can be reached at P.O. Box 507, Fremont, NB 60826, by phone (402) 727-4071, or e-mail beerbohm@teknetwork.com. "This is making me physically ill," Beerbohm said. "Any help will be greatly appreciated."

SCOUTING

However, according to Green Arrow Editor Darren Vincenzo, despite public perception to the contrary, he and DC are not sitting on their hands passively waiting for the elements to fall into place. Vincenzo wants Green Arrow to be a reality, DC wants it to be a reality, and, apparently, so does Smith.

"The official situation is that we're in discussions with a writer for the character of Green Arrow, and that writer is Kevin Smith," explained Vincenzo. "Kevin and I have sat down on more than one occasion, and figured out where we can go with the character and the series. We're not 'holding' it until he decides he wants to do something. We've sat down and discussed plans as we would with any writer."

The editor also explained that not only aren't they in a holding pattern, recent months have seen an increase in actively bringing the project closer to reality than ever before.

"We're working to step up the procedure and get things rolling along faster than they have been," Vincenzo said.

"We're doing the best we can and as of right now, we are stepping up the speed as best we can. We're further along this month than last, and further along than two months ago. We're very interested in having Kevin involved, so we'd really like to see this work out with Kevin. But it's likely that the time frame will not allow the involvement of some of the names that have been linked to the character."

Scary Godmother gets animated

Sirius Entertainment recently announced that Mainframe Entertainment (Beast Wars, War Planets) has optioned Jill Thompson's Scary Godmother series of graphic novels and specials for television and direct-to-video movies.

"Scary Godmother is a property we've been pursuing for a long time," said Mainframe V.P. of Creative Affairs Dan DiDio.

"Jill Thompson is one of the top creators in the comics industry at this time and we're extremely excited about the prospect of working with her on this project."

Thompson said she is extremely pleased with the deal as well, citing Mainframe's dedication to a faithful adaptation of her work. "I'm really excited about this," she added. "I enjoy Mainframe's animation style, and a 3-D conception of Scary Godmother is the only way I'd like to see it animated. In addition to the books and comics I'm working on, I can't wait to get started on this type of project."

Thompson's third Scary Godmother Halloween storybook, Scary Godmother: The Mystery Date is due in October, while Thompson's first Scary Godmother mini-series, tentatively titled The Trouble with Harry, is scheduled to ship early next year.

An announcement regarding a major animation deal concerning Mark Crilley's Akiko is expected soon.

Darth Toad. According to The Hollywood Reporter, Ray Park (Darth Maul) will play The Toad in the upcoming X-Men film from 20th Century Fox. The announcement confirms numerous rumors that Park would take part in the film that were based on Park's somewhat coy denials of being under consideration for the part at appearances early this summer.

Additionally, Bruce Davison (Harry and the Hendersons – The Series) has been cast as the anti-mutant Senator Kelly. Park and Davison join Ian McKellen (Magneto), Patrick Stewart (Professor X), Dougray Scott (Wolverine), Anna Paquin (Rogue), and Halle Berry (Storm). Cyclops and Jean Grey are the only major roles left uncast, and announcements are expected soon.

Additionally, reports in Variety have the release date of the film pushed back from next summer to that fall.

Tarzan II* in the works. Thanks to the strong box-office performance of Disney's version of Tarzan, a sequel is already in the planning stages, according to The Hollywood Reporter. Currently, the director of the sequel as well as the format of release are the stumbling blocks, as one of Tarzan's directors is at work on 102 Dalmatians (a live-action sequel to 101 Dalmatians) and Disney is set to release its first theatrically released animated sequel this fall with Toy Story 2.

Doctor Who, Ninjak* films in development. According to The Hollywood Reporter, Paul Anderson's Impact Pictures is currently developing film treatments for Doctor Who, as well as a big-screen version of Acclaim Comics' Ninjak. Robin Shou (Mortal Kombat) is attached to star in the latter. Anderson's next project is a remake of Death Race 2000 for Paramount starring Tom Cruise.

Wolfman update. While his name is all-too infrequently associated with comic books these days, Marv Wolfman is keeping himself busy with Wolfmill Entertainment, the producers of the animated Pocket Dragon Adventures.

"We're currently pitching Fearless Fosdick, based on the character from Li'l Abner, to a number of studios," Wolfman said. "Also, the Elfquest animated feature is moving along well. Wolfmill Entertainment, headed by myself and Craig Miller, have, along with creator Wendy Pini, written the first draft of the script and are starting the second draft now. We expect to be in production later this year. It's being produced with Sceneries International, which is currently completing the Heavy Metal animated movie sequel, out this fall. Wolfmill will be acting as executive producers as well as writers."

I really am just so tired of people talking about how we need to raise the prices of comics.

The low end of the market is the last place we have left to get hold of older comics at reasonable prices. If guys like Cliff Biggers drive us out of there by making it unaffordable, what then?

How high can these prices go? Slowly but surely, it seems as though they will eventually weed out of the marketplace all casual reader-collectors.

[Keep in mind that Cliff's comments in #1342 were based on a discussion of what's actually happening in the marketplace, not on some theoretical abstract. If you can't find a Near Mint copy of a specific title for what a price guide says it should go for in Near Mint — well, how useful is the guide? And he's suggesting that there may be a different formula for computing prices for some specific issues. My guess is that that's an accurate reflection of what's going on.

Also reassuring is that what Cliff was discussing especially were "key issues." Those are the very issues most likely to be reprinted — which could be helpful in the case of "what then?"

I also suspect that another factor will begin to affect prices soon: the third-party grading service. It may result in escalating prices on the very highest end of collectibles. But it may lower prices for the rest of the field, especially for one of my favorite unofficial "conditions": the "reading copy."]

From time to time people write to CBG with kudos for their favorite comics shop or retailer. I've never written one of those letters, though when reading one I've often thought that I should. Despite the fact that the comics store I go to and the man who owns it have figured prominently in my life for 15 years, I've never written to sing their praises. I've finally been motivated to do it, but I really wish I weren't.

Jef Parker opened the first Collector's Edge Comics on Milwaukee's south side sometime in the late '70s or early '80s. I didn't discover the store until about 1984. I was working at a theater, and Jef delivered its film schedules around town. We got talking comics once when he was making a pickup. I had been out of comics for about five years, but he sold me on the idea of coming by his store and seeing how things had changed. Jef is a natural at that kind of thing and on that first visit he had me signed up to his subscription service, which at the time was a bunch of handwritten lists in a spiral notebook.

A few years later the theater had become an unpleasant place to work, and I met with Jef about coming on board with him. I started at Collector's Edge the next week and often ran his new second location. I eventually left for graduate school, and others filled my position, but, when I came back, Jef opened a third store explicitly for me to run. I stayed there until the birth of my son forced me to leave the retail counter behind, but on and off for the next few years I still designed fliers, managed customer orders, and consulted about upcoming comics. I worked for Jef longer and more rewardingly than anyone else in my life.

Through those years, I witnessed Jef take his single store up to a peak of five locations, then shrink back to three at a time when many other stores were closing outright. The notebook of customer lists developed into a sophisticated computerized system. Customers came and went, but, throughout the parade of changing faces both behind the counter and in front of it, these shops maintained a spirit of camaraderie more like a corner bar than a retail store. Collector's Edge Comics became, for me at least, "a place where everybody knows your name." And at the center of it, always, was Jef.

Jef surrounded himself with smart, comics-savvy employees who were consistently able to do things right. When CBG would go through its periodic spates of "bad retailer" letters, I was always amazed at how much better things were for me than for those people. Collector's Edge is a model comics chain in many ways, with innovative racks, above-average clerks, a superior subscriber system, and a huge inventory with great prices. While all of this owes a lot to the caliber of employee the store has had, the man responsible for gathering those employees was always Jef, and he inspired some kind of fierce loyalty in them.

Sure, there were times when Jef would seem unconnected to the day-to-day action in the store, and we'd joke about how he'd "gone to Mongo" and then go on keeping things on an even keel. Or when he would lambaste me and others for spending 25% of our effort finding the last 2% of errors in the order system. He has faults, but they are insignificant when stacked up against his strengths.

Jef is a stand-up guy, both professionally and personally. He's come through for me more times than I can count. He gave me a job when I needed one, opened a store just so I could run it, helped me move twice, and taught me how to drive. This is not a unique situation, either. Jef has come through for many of his employees and customers — or maybe I should just say "friends," since that is how he treated all of us, in so many ways that had nothing to do with comics.

Thinking back, I can remember Jef perched like a gargoyle on a stool at the base of the shop's stairs, personally pricing stacks of comics people had pulled from the basement stock during the annual New Year's Sale. Jef sitting on the cart after rolling my belongings up to my new apartment. At a staff meeting reciting one of his stock "pep" talks. Having me out to dinner for my birthday and talking about it as if it were an annual event, when we'd never done it before or since. The glee in his voice when he called to tell me that he'd fixed a problem at the store that I'd been warning him about — and then his depression when the problem recurred.

Laughing at me, as I carted cardboard boxes to the recycler, when he could more easily have taken them to the dump. Jef smiling on the TV news, cutting the cake at the spectacularly unsuccessful Superman wedding reception I had masterminded. Sitting in the restaurant across the street from the store, endlessly discussing how to steer maturing comics readers toward more mature comics to keep them from leaving completely.

Showing up in the middle of the night to help me decorate one shop as a surprise for the manager's 30th birthday. Explaining to me why my right turns were always too wide. Jef flipping a coin with me over the price of the first stack of back issues I bought from him — and then losing graciously, even though the higher price was much less than I'd expected to pay.

I haven't seen him much lately, since I pick up my weekly fix at a different location than the one he personally oversees. When we would get together, we would talk politics, and he'd offer to take me to the shooting range. I'd always defer, thinking we'd get to it eventually.

I regret that. I regret that I've never actually heard his legendary Watchmen TPB sales pitch. I regret that we didn't meet for more than one annual birthday dinner.

Yesterday I found out that Jef has been diagnosed with cancer. He's a tough guy and, if there's any justice, he'll beat it. Between comics, books, and games, I'd say that Jef has been responsible for a majority of my amusement for the last 15 years. I'd gladly give it all back, if it would help him out of this, and I'll bet many of his other customers would do the same. No matter what happens, I know that I'll never pick up a comic book or walk into a comics shop without remembering that I wouldn't be doing it — that I couldn't have driven to the store in the first place or worked in one for seven years — if it weren't for him.

Jef has helped me out in more ways and in more different circumstances than anyone else I've ever known. While he's still here and while I still can, I want him and all CBG readers to know what an excellent retailer and good friend Jef has been. His customers already know.

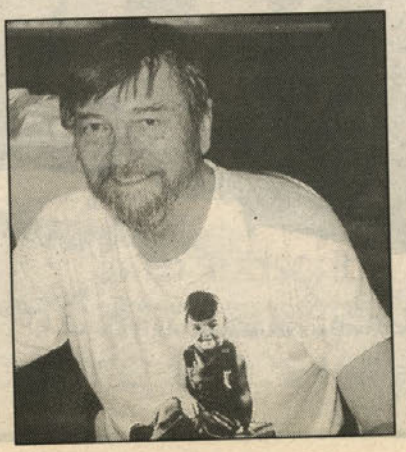
With the excitement of conventions and related guest stars in full swing, I just wanted to send these photos I took last month at The Coliseum here in St. Petersburg. (Actually, it was a collectibles toy show where I finally found an item I had been looking for for quite some time: a Superman button found in Kellogg's Pep Cereal boxes in the 1940s.)

The one photo is of "Porky" from The Little Rascals. The photo I am in features a gent that I was especially interested in meeting: Tommy Bond. While known primarily as "Butch" in The Little Rascals, he was also Jimmy Olsen in both of those wonderful Kirk Alyn Superman serials, circa 1950. He is a really nice guy who has a lot of fascinating stories to share with fans pertaining to his work in Hollywood in the late '30s and '40s.



He mentioned, as an example, that he met Boris Karloff in full Frankenstein makeup in the '40s (and that he had never been so scared in all his life) and that he had gone on to look at the set of the Munchkin Village when The Wizard of Oz was being filmed. I would heartily encourage fans to take a few minutes to meet this remarkable man if they find him at a convention near them.

Wanted to thank you for your ad (why, yes!) in CBG #1341, featuring Red Sonja — and to mention that, while I saw no credits for the art, I believe it's by Mary Wilshire, whose work on the title pleased me best second only to the Wizard, Frank Thorne's. Speaking of whom, please consider a retrospective (full of praise) for Thorne, whose work, publishable in a "family paper" and not, remains among the most beautiful in comics.

I am almost overwhelmed by the quantity of highest-quality comics published today, such as:

The Factor by Nat Gertler is a five-issue super-hero series without the super-hero. As did Kurt Busiek's Astro City early issues, The Factor deals with the effect on the common folk of a super-hero in town.

Jim Schumaker and Bradley Walton, Joe Staton, Matt Feazell, Tom Luth, Carla Speed McNeil, Ted Slampyak, and others with equally individual and satisfying ability illustrate Gertler's several short stories each issue: a cop's point-of-view; a kid's; a proud old woman's faith; two young women's license; a spy story; an urban near-crime story (told twice, via two illustrators).

Gertler goes after what it might really feel like to look up in the sky and catch just a glimpse of that "bird — plane — super-man!" and then have to return to just getting through your day.

The Write Stuff: Neil Gaiman

School's back in session, and, while the kids are writing those "What I Did on My Summer Vacation" essays, CBG devotes this month's issues to five of the greatest comics writers of the 1990s. First: Neil Gaiman writes about The Dreaming, but he works in the real world — to the delight of his fans! CBG talks with Gaiman about his life in comics and his upcoming projects.

Issue #4 of the series that never shows its title character is due out in April from About Comics, P.O. Box 94359, Pasadena, CA 91109.

Far West sets elves and rifle-bearing bears in the (very) mythic American Old West, and makes it work by creating two strong, unique individuals in bounty hunter Meg (Rameghan Valnorium) and companion philosopher Phil (the bear).

The smooth art by Richard Moore moves gracefully through lively layouts of powerfully drawn faces, blazing six-guns, and an outlaw astride a fiery dragon, burning down a train for robbery. The dialogue is clever. Meg and Phil are clever, and what they say, how they say it, too, is clever — is fun to read over several times. Meg is confronted by a team of "professional" bounty hunters who denigrate her skills: "Girl, 'Girl' " says Meg, "Did you hear that?" "I was there, yes — " Phil tells her. "You sort of are, you know, derogatory emphasis aside ..." Conversations to enjoy, situations to raise an eyebrow, by Richard Moore, artist and writer, Antarctic Press, 727 Wurzbach, Suite #204, San Antonio, TX 78240.

Xeno's Arrow by Greg Beettam and Stephen Geigen-Miller is a simple tale of a naïve lad of extraterrestrial birth who finds a home in a far-off planetary zoo. The simple, basic questions of what is life, what is beautiful, what is right, are dealt with from off-kilter perspectives from way-off-center entities who inhabit the zoo.

Lovely, smooth, cartoony art perfectly supports the tone and tenor of the stories, which are less wildly funny than Bone but just as thoughtfully assembled. Through gently barbed humor, Xeno's calls our own culture into question, which makes this a wonderful title to share with children who will enjoy the surface story — lost, orphaned child in a new world — while providing adult readers with thoughtful commentary on this world of our own. Three issues currently published by Cup o' Tea Studios, P.O. Box 63, Station P, Toronto, Ontario, M5S 2S6, Canada.

The Adventures of Barry Ween, Boy Genius include a first-grade field trip to an art museum and the capture of international art thieves by Ween to save the object of his (unspoken) affections. "If my IQ could be measured, it would loom somewhere around 350. If I have any consolation, it's that by the time I'm 21, I'll be certifiably insane." Barry might be Calvin (of ... and Hobbes) one or two years later. Writer Judd Winick's drawings have a harsh-edged cartooning style that gets a lot of expression into people's expressions. Three issues published by Image Comics, 1440 North Harbor Blvd., Suite 305, Fullerton, CA 92835.

Amy Unbounded is a remarkable comic book by writer-artist Rachel Hartman. Hartman chronicles stories about 9-year-old Amy, whose mother is a clock-maker and whose father is a tailor in a medieval world of donkey carts, exiled knights, and home-baked bread. Amy's imagination conjures up ramparts stormed, heroes colliding, and herself as a hero's hero, as she helps a cousin with her sheep or journeys to an aunt's to fetch a cheese. Using expressive, simple lines, Hartman depicts location and emotion with equal strength and clarity — never any clutter in her pictures.

Amy narrates her adventures, real and imagined, with wit and aplomb; Hartman's writing is succinct and speakable and fun to read out loud. Amy Unbounded is another comics great to read with kids. It's fun and funny: the Unsinkable Molly Brown as a 9-year-old in a time of scholarly dragons and street-faire puppet shows. Eight digest-sized issues are available from Rachel Hartman, Pughouse Press, 5464 S. Harper, #20, Chicago, IL 60615.

I would also like to at least mention: Stan Sakai's Usagi Yojimbo, one of the best, longest-running writer-artist titles around, part of the Dark Horse Stable; Batton Lash's Wolff & Byrd, soon to be known as Supernatural Law, consistently well-written, cleverly written, carefully drawn from Exhibit A Press; Jeff Smith's Bone and Dave Sim's Cerebus, both likely needing no further words; and a quick alphabet of fabulous independent titles: Age of Bronze, Akiko, Astounding Space, Astronauts in Trouble, Box-Office Poison, Browser and Sequoia, Castle Waiting, the incredible Clan Apis, Cave Woman, Colonia, Dreamwalker, Finder, Gon, Jenny Finn, Jinx/Torso, Kane, Kurt Busiek's Astro City, Mage, Mr. Blank, Nowhere, QuickenForbidden, Reid Fleming, Robyn of Sherwood, Stray Bullets, Starchilde, Strangers in Paradise, Trekker, and The Wretch.

I cannot understand anyone who claims there is a slump in quality — exciting! — comics to read today. Moreover, I encourage all to sample at least some of these listed above. I only wish I had space to give each of them just 50 words to entice you.

Just got back from the Chicago Wizard Con and had a great time again. It seemed very organized: no waiting a long time to get in this year. About the only thing I thought that could be improved is more panels. That has really seemed to diminish the last two years, and not as many nighttime events going on.

I helped out again for a few hours at the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund booth, which was fun. I watched George Pérez sign comics till his hand hurt — and draw sketches — with all the money going to the CBLDF. He had to limit the number of sketches each day for obvious reasons (like not having a bionic arm), but there was no end to the number of people who would have paid for one.

Being there Friday and Saturday, I saw at least 50 new members sign up and pay the $25, and a couple who paid more: One person paid $50 for a membership and another paid $100. This nice person (I have no idea what her name was) also had organized an auction at a different show and put $200 in the donation jar that was sitting next to George Pérez.

I bought a wide assortment of items this year, including the ComicBase software (I let him know that your latest comments on the product convinced me), I got the hardcover Pulp Art book, and I got an original 3 Geeks page, a treasure showing the fans winning the trivia contest at the con!

I attend Craig Shutt (aka Mr. Silver Age)'s, trivia contest every year. The fans actually scored some points this year. Mark Waid didn't know the name of Captain Action's panther and he couldn't fill in the blanks on a DC house ad on how fast The Flash was. It was something like The Flash is as fast as lightning, a cheetah, a blank, and a blank. He couldn't fill in either blank! The answers were weird: a rhea (a large flightless bird) and a duckhawk! I'm a zookeeper and I've never heard of a duckhawk! Come on, how fast would a hawk have to be to catch a duck?

I spent $48 on finding all the Oz series comics I was missing from Arrow comics — and a big thank you to the co-creator of the series who took the time to draw me a floor plan on what order to read the mini-series and anthology appearances. I'm sure spending $50 helped, but I get the feeling he would have done it, regardless. I bought one of the last two copies of the CBG Checklist and Price Guide at your booth, wanted to get The Comic-Book Book, but you were out.

I bought the HC Stray Bullets, also one of the last. They had sold all 18 copies they'd brought within the first few hours on Friday. Found three issues of Emma Davenport for 50¢ each, found more of my flood-lost Elfquest comics, all for $1 and under, and almost completed the Kamandi series I want to reread. I spent my last $10 on an autographed picture, signed in person, of course, of Claudia Christensen (tell me I can't relate to The Three Geeks!) and mentioned to her that, if the Doc Savage movie involves Pat Savage, she would be perfect.

I have a couple of legal questions for the all-knowing Maggie. When I bought the 3 Geeks original art, they added on tax, no big amount, but wasn't there just a big case in California that decided comic-book art was art and not taxable? Was that just a state case or was it federal?

And, by the way, I wondered regarding some videotapes on sale at the show, I have gotten catalogs in the mail from video sellers saying that movies, shows, etc. that either haven't been released in America or not released in a certain form (directors' cuts, etc.) aren't illegal to sell here. Any comments on that?

[No, the case you're remembering involved Paul Mavrides and concerned California taxation. (Chris Oarr of the CBLDF, by the way, could have told you all about it; the CBLDF was involved with the legal action which saved countless California comics artists countless dollars.)

You were in Illinois and were buying the physical art, so you were paying an Illinois sales tax.

While I can't respond specifically to generalized cases, bootleg copies are, indeed, illegal for sale. Those are cases in which the dealer has copied material and charged to sell the copies. However, there's a difference when it comes to paying for the prerecorded material sold commercially by the company owning the rights — and then reselling that prerecorded material. However, again, keep in mind that a British prerecorded videotape won't play on most U.S. videotape players, so those would be illegal bootlegs.]

I can't help but wonder if anyone else is not excited by the upcoming "Heroes Reborn: Doomsday" event. The synopsis given for each title completely failed to interest me, with the single exception of Young Allies. No big surprise; it's the one by Fabian Nicieza (with the Thunderbolts art team of Mark Bagley and Al Vey). For a storyline that's supposed to set "...up [Doom's] immediate status quo for the foreseeable future," there sure isn't a lot of Doom mentioned in the various titles' write-ups. Fewer than half of the titles mention Doom in any way. I might pick up Young Allies but I'm going to pass on the rest.

JJM, I had a problem with Soviet Super Soldiers, as well, but for different reasons. It was something of a mess, continuity-wise. I never did figure out if it was a result of Fabian missing out on others' stories, or if SSS was being ignored by other writers. I am looking forward to his work on Thunderbolts, though. He's one of only a couple writers who could have replaced Busiek and not resulted in my dropping the title.

I sure wish I could afford the Golden Age Green Lantern Archives. I really like the old GL — more than Kyle or Hal. In fact, Alan Scott's presence on the team was a deciding factor in my buying the new JSA series. Well, Christmas is coming. I'll have to make sure this book is on my list.

Lest I forget, major thanks for the Liberty Meadows coverage a few weeks ago. Without CBG's coverage, I would never have picked up a copy. I laughed out loud. My wife laughed out loud. Her mom chuckled merrily. I thought my father in law was going to have a coronary, he was laughing so hard. My mom — Well, my mom is something of a stick-in-the-mud; she enjoyed parts of it, but not all. It's really too bad that the local newspaper seems to have such poor taste in comic strips. I'd (almost) be willing to subscribe just for a daily dose of Liberty Meadows.

[I've loved Frank Cho's work ever since I first saw it — and he just seems to be getting better.]

I would have thought, with a title like "Children of the Atom," your article in #1339 would have at least mentioned the real origin of The X-Men. Jack Kirby was a science-fiction fan and borrowed many ideas from classic science fiction. There's nothing wrong with that, by the way; all writers borrow from other writers. For example, Kamandi owes a lot to the cover of the early Ace paperback of Andre Norton's Daybreak — 2250 A.D.

The real origin of The X-Men is in one of the best-loved science-fiction classics, Children of the Atom by Wilmar Shiras, about a group of children with super-human intelligence and creativity, born following a leak in a nuclear reactor. They eventually are brought together at a school for gifted youngsters, where they are threatened by a mutant-hating rabble rouser.

I think everyone who enjoys The X-Men would enjoy this novel, even though in the novel the children's power is intelligence rather than physical abilities.

[Children of the Atom was a 1953 collection of her short stories (starting with "In Hiding," Nov 48) that had run in Astounding Science Fiction from 1948 to 1950. And, it should be noted, there were similar themes (though with different backstory) in Zenna Henderson's stories of The People, which began with "Ararat" in The Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction (Oct 52).

In fact, the concept of super-children — and the problems of educating them — were pretty common in SF by then. A.E. van Vogt's Slan (which ran in Astounding, Sep 40) had dealt with mutant-hating rabble rousers (and the problems of hiding, when mutants can be physically identified) more than a decade earlier. And Theodore Sturgeon's More than Human (which started with "Baby Is Three" in Galaxy, Oct 52) is simply another outstanding example of terrific storytelling involving the problems of a young mutant.

Comics seemed to be most strongly influenced when stories entered other media, so Mark Clifton's "Star, Bright" (Galaxy, Jul 52) being dramatized on the April 10, 1956, X Minus One radio show could have been yet another impetus.

And, yes, all the above are entertaining and worth any X-Men fan's attention.]

Anthropomorphic antics abound in Bobo's Progress

Bobo's Progress, a new funny animal strip distributed by King Features Syndicate, features the adventures of an animal band comprising Bobo, a bear; Lenny, a rabbit; and Stu, a bird. Described by creator Dan Wright as "a comic strip for everyone who's every tried (against their better judgment) to work with their friends," the strip is co-written by Tom Spurgeon.

Wright added that the anthropomorphic trio is seeking "the meaning of life the only way they can: one day at a time. Some days that means work, some days it means quiet moments, and some days it means jus' hanging around. Bobo might make better progress without Lenny and Stu, but the ride wouldn't be as fun."

Heroes assemble for Halloween

Bulfinch Press has scheduled DC Comics Masks, a 60-page book by Christos Kondeatis containing three-dimensional cardboard masks of nine various DC characters, for release Oct. 1. Assembly instructions and biographical information on each character, as well as a color rendering of each character's complete costume, will be included. The book retails for $25.

Dark Horse has scheduled a series of lunchboxes primarily inspired by Dark Horse characters. The initial wave, scheduled for release late this year, features Molly's Escort Service (from Frank Miller's Sin City), Mike Mignola's Hellboy, Evan Dorkin's Milk & Cheese, Sergio Aragonés' Groo the Wanderer, and 1950s pin-up Bettie Page (featuring photos by Bunny Yeager). Each 8˝ x 7˝ x 3¾˝ lunchbox contains a postcard of the respective box's art and retails for $19.95.

According to Dark Horse Product Development Spokesperson David Scroggy the boxes will "put the spice into your deviled eggs and the ham in your sandwich."

Playing Mantis has scheduled its line of action figures based on Mystery Men to ship in late August. The 8˝ figures retail for $9.99 each and include (left to right): The Shoveler, Mr. Furious, The Blue Raja, The Bowler, Captain Amazing, and The Spleen. A Casanova Frankenstein figure will also be available. The figures will be available at both mass-market and direct-market retailers.

Toy Vault will release its first deluxe Tolkien figure

Toy Vault has announced its first deluxe action figure based on J.R.R. Tolkien's Lord of the Nazgûl, a servant of Sauron the Ring Lord. The 8˝ figure is scaled at one foot to one inch, "almost three times the height of our Frodo figure," said Toy Vault Creative Director Jon Huston. "He has 12 points of articulation, so he moves almost as well as the old Mego superhero toys. The icing on the cake is the toy's eyes — he has a prism in his helmet that causes his red eyes to glow. It's really spectacular!"

Scheduled to ship in November, the figure has a suggested retail price of $19.95. Two variant editions are available in addition to the standard figure, which comes with sword and cloak: The Black Captain, a Diamond exclusive, features the figure in battle with a sword, a mace, and a glow-in-the-dark skeleton. The Toy Vault Toy Club version has the character attired as The Black Rider with dagger and cloak.

"I always knew you had stones; you didn't have to go to such great lengths to prove it."

— Mike Gold, comics editor

Let's get the personal stuff out of the way first. Yes, I did have a nasty medical adventure in mid-July that prevented me from attending the Wizard World Chicago convention. It wasn't the first time I'd passed kidney stones, but it was the first time I'd had to be rushed to the hospital via ambulance because of them. It was not fun.

"I'd love to see DC reprint Sugar & Spike in mass-market trade paperbacks and "Scholastic Books" type editions."

However, I am doing much better. I took time off from my daily online column to recuperate from said adventure and to go on vacation with Sainted Wife Barb and our kids, but, by the time you read this, I will be back at the keyboard and once again doing the job of three men — Curly, Larry, and Moe.

I'm feeling pretty good these days. Fellow CBG columnist Bob Ingersoll and I have written a prestige format Star Trek comic book for DC's WildStorm imprint. It's a tale set during the Enterprise's original five-year mission, and my best guess at this time is that it will come out early next year. We were pleased with how well our story turned out and by the cooperation we received from those fine folks at Paramount. They were terrific about letting us play with their toys.

I also learned recently that Captain America: Liberty's Torch, the prose novel I wrote with Ingersoll, had the best sell-through of any of the Marvel novels to date. My thanks to all of you who bought the book and sent us so many nice comments on it. There are still a few copies out there, but I suspect the supply is becoming increasingly limited.

In fact, I'm in such a good mood that I'm not even going to get into it with the readers who sent me angry letters complaining about my positions on gun control and posting the Ten Commandments in schools. In the case of the former, I'll concede that we could do a much better job enforcing the gun laws we already have on the books and that the right to bear arms should be protected. Where we differ, I think, is that I don't believe "maintaining a well-armed militia" translates into keeping an arsenal of assault and assault-like weapons in the basement — or in apocalyptic visions of jack-booted ATF storm troopers marching door-to-door seizing the beloved firearms of law-abiding citizens. They probably don't even have up-to-date street maps.

As for the few readers who took issue with my contention that posting the Ten Commandments in schools in unconstitutional, well, I suppose the courts will decide that one, though I doubt very much they will overturn the Constitution to declare the United States a "Christian" country. In the meantime, the readers who sent me lists of alleged quotes from our nation's founders to support said position might do well to attempt to track down the original publications of those quotes. More than a few of them are fabrications concocted and disseminated by members of the religious right who have embraced a liberal interpretation of "You shall not lie."

Since we're now 500 words into this column without a hint of any reviews, why don't we continue to dip into the "Medina Mailbag"? Just click your ruby heels three times and say, "There's nothing like comics. There's nothing like comics."

John G. Pierce wrote to add information to my recent column on The Atomic Knights:

I liked your recent piece on The Atomic Knights story. You might be interested to know that a third jazz fan in the comic-book world was former Fawcett editor and later writer Rod Reed, with whom I corresponded throughout much of the 1970s. Rod was one of the earliest Fawcett editors. He later left to edit Downbeat but continued to freelance for Fawcett. (Fawcett had a rule that its own editors could not be writers — a good rule, I think.) Anyway, Rod told me that he, Julie Schwartz, and John Broome used to attend concerts at Town Hall. Broome was one of Reed's favorite writers, too.

The Schwartz love of jazz also played a role in Denny O'Neil's first Batman script. I'll give Tips! readers a week to track it down before I write about it next week in conjunction with a review of Bob Brodsky's terrific O'Neil Observer fanzine.

Sten Drescher took issue with a "No Man's Land" comment I made in CBG #1335. He wrote:

You say you have a hard time suspending your disbelief in the "No Man's Land" scenario. I'm surprised at that, since a real-world equivalent is in Centralia, Pa., less than 400 miles away from your own home. There, the Federal government has bought up most of the community, relocated most of its residents, and is trying to force the remainder out of town. Why? A semi-natural disaster: a May 1962 fire at a trash dump ignited the coal mine under the town. With that as a real-world backdrop, is it that much of a stretch for the Federal government, under the pressure of possibly psionically influenced lobbying, to go from passively quarantining a town to actively quarantining a city?

I think so. I can accept a mind-controlled government — Jerry Springer for Congress? — but I find it difficult to accept that the American citizenry would stand for such treatment of their fellow citizens. Even New Yorkers. Rest assured, though, that I'll keep an open mind when I sit down to read and review the entirety of "No Man's Land" for a future Tips! or three.

Jim Fales sent me this note:

I read and enjoyed your column about the DC Archives Editions. I'm also a big fan of these books. As a kid, I remember my mouth falling open when I saw the cover of All Star Comics #3 reprinted and I suddenly became aware that there was this pantheon of Golden Age characters. I was actually mad at the owner of the local coffee shop for not buying Flash before issue #105. I talked to my cousin in Brooklyn about The Justice Society guys and he said, "Oh, yeah. You can get used copies of those issues in the candy store around the corner for a quarter each." It might as well have been in Timbuktu. It wasn't until the recent Golden Age archives that I could finally read such stories. The original issues are just too expensive.

I also bought the DC/U.S. Postal Service reprint of Action Comics #1. While the first Superman story has been reprinted a number of times, this is the first time I read all the other, admittedly lame, stories that accompanied it.

This brings me to my question. Why has DC not reprinted these original issues on a regular basis? Sure, occasionally we see a key Golden or Silver Age reprint but few (if any) others. The majority of comic-book readers are older and more interested in DC history than the kids and could afford such reprints.

The Archives Editions only reprint stories of lead characters. But, as a kid, I enjoyed the backup stories as much as the Superman or Batman tale that was on the cover of Action, Adventure Comics, and Detective Comics.

Mind you, I'm not complaining; I'll still get the Archives. I would even buy a Blackhawk or Sgt. Rock Archives and I was never into their war comics as a kid. (OK, I might draw the line at a Sugar and Spike Archives.) I just think DC Comics is missing a huge opportunity here.

No, no, no, my friend, do not draw the line at any chance to read Sheldon Mayer's wonderful Sugar and Spike comics. These are some of the best humor comics ever published, and I'd love to see DC reprint them in mass-market trade paperbacks and "Scholastic Books" type editions. They could easily become best-sellers.

That said, and, while I agree with you that there's a wealth of fine material that DC could reprint, I have to say that it has been improving steadily in this area. The last order catalog I saw featured a Superman in the Sixties trade paperback, a replica edition of the More Secret Origins 80-page giant, a collection of Jack Kirby's Forever People, and an issue of Tales Calculated to Drive You Mad, an ongoing series which has been reprinting early issues of the Mad comic book from the 1950s. This represents $45 worth of comics. As much as I would love to see more, I can't say the market for this kind of material has grown to the point at which it can support more. But, certainly, the more fandom supports what DC is reprinting, the more incentive there will be for DC to dip further into its rich history for future collections in a variety of formats.

Thanks to all of you who wrote with comments, questions, and just plain good wishes. I'll see you next week.

PUNISHER PLUS 25:
ANATOMY OF A COMIC-BOOK CRAZE

"If he'd been on anti-depressants, none of this would have happened!"

— Mike Baron

From big splash to backlash — one man on a rampage changed the course of super-hero comics

War Journal Entry #1: Still dealing with loss of wife and kids. If I have to see that "atsa spicy meat-ball," commercial one more time, I'm gonna get a gun. Whoop, that's it …

By Matt Brady

Like many Marvel characters of the era, the full origin of the character that would come to be called The Punisher came from a number of sources. "Gerry Conway came up with the original idea," said Roy Thomas, who was Marvel editor in chief in 1974, when the character was created. "Gerry originally wanted to call him The Assassin, and, like many Marvel heroes at the time, he had the possibility of being a hero despite the name.

"Gerry was consciously basing him on characters like Mack Bolan: The Executioner and The Destroyer — characters who were very popular in men's paperback fiction at that time. He wanted to bring a character like Mack Bolan into Spider-Man, and to me, as the editor in chief, it sounded like a great idea."

Everything about the character didn't sound great to Thomas' boss, however. "Stan liked the character and the idea, but he didn't like the name," Thomas said. "As Stan rightly pointed out, we could never have done a series on 'The Assassin' or turned him into a hero. Stan came up with the actual Punisher name, Gerry naturally decided to go with it, and he came out in Amazing Spider-Man #129."

John Romita Sr., Marvel art director at the time, was responsible for the huge skull on The Punisher's chest, expanding Conway's original idea of a smaller white skull on a black jumpsuit. Ross Andru, who drew the issue, brought the costume and character to life, showing The Punisher to be a man of action with a permanent scowl. While in his debut (and shortly thereafter) The Punisher was portrayed as a killer for hire, that aspect of the character was quickly dropped.

For the time, The Punisher was a metaphor for many things — a shell-shocked soldier who couldn't turn off' his killing instincts, Biblical retribution against criminals, or the voice of society lashing out against urban unrest, an image that was becoming more and more popular thanks to "Dirty Harry" Callahan and Charles Bronson's Death Wish series of films. According to Thomas, Marvel wasn't too worried about letting The Punisher loose in its universe. "Gerry was familiar with both writing and editing and knew what his limitations were," Thomas said. "He knew he could only go so far with the character and he knew he was walking a tightrope. The Punisher was the way that Gerry wanted to push the envelope a little."

A year after his debut, Conway revealed the origin of The Punisher in Marvel Preview #2. He was Frank Castle (later expanded to Castiglione) — a soldier who survived a botched gangland hit that killed his entire family. The Punisher continued to appear over the years in the pages of Spider-Man and Daredevil, enriching the titles with an increase in sales with each appearance. Despite his popularity with fans, it wasn't until 1983, almost a decade after his debut, that he saw his own series.

War Journal Entry #157: After years of quick in-and-out jobs, am finally going solo. Hope to chill out, catch Aliens at the bijou between jobs.

White-hot Punisher

"Steven Grant and Mike Zeck came into my office one day and pitched doing a Punisher limited series," former Punisher Editor Carl Potts said. "I believe at the time, they had pitched it to a number of the other editors at Marvel, and the general feeling at that point was that The Punisher was kind of a third-string, lame supporting character who shot rubber bullets. He was lucky at that time if he was one-dimensional. He was more half-dimensional."

Luckily for The Punisher, Potts' editorial instincts won out. "I'd always loved Mike's art and had been looking for a reason to work with him. To take on The Punisher, a character who had really made an impression on me in the past with Archie Goodwin's stories in the black-and-white magazines as well as the guest-shots in Daredevil by Miller — to me that seemed like the direction to go with the character and that seemed like what Steven and Mike wanted to do."

Grant said, "I liked The Punisher mainly because he was different from every other Marvel character. He didn't hinge on super-powers and soap opera. In terms of action, you could get away with things with The Punisher you couldn't do with other characters and you could do it in a straightforward way. Both Mike and I wanted to move into more of an action-movie mode, more clipped and direct than what most people had seen."

While Potts, Grant, and Zeck may have been sold on the idea, there were those who weren't. "When I put in the memo for the limited series, everyone from editorial to marketing thought I was joking," Potts said. "I thought the timing was right: Rambo was hot, the Schwarzenegger films were really catching fire, and Dirty Harry had been popular for years. I thought there might be something happening in the public's taste and aesthetics, and The Punisher might appeal to them."

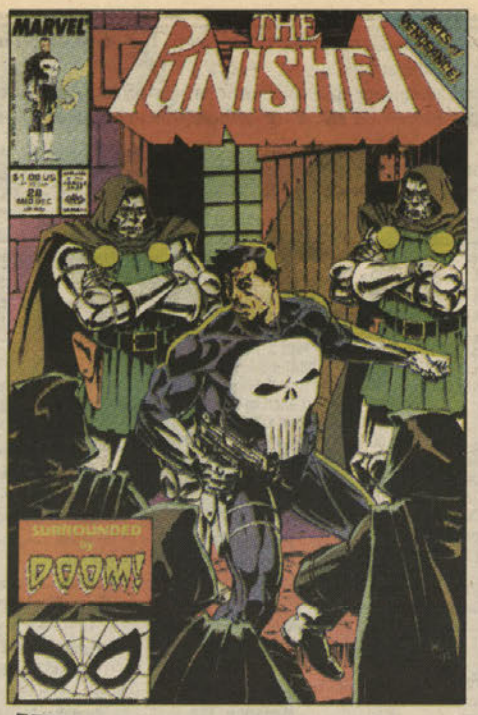
Resistance to The Punisher wasn't limited to Potts. The mini-series went on sale, but Marvel did little to promote it. Nevertheless, it sold out three hours after it hit the shelves. "No one at Marvel thought the character had any potential," Grant said. "We did. As late as the day before the first issue of the mini-series came out, a prominent member of Marvel's marketing staff told me very sternly, 'Marvel's audience is not interested in stories about a psychopathic killer.' By 3 the next afternoon, they were singing a different tune."

Grant and Zeck's sell-out limited series prompted Potts to pitch The Punisher as an ongoing series with Mike Baron (who was working with Potts on Amazing High Adventure at the time) writing and former Daredevil inker Klaus Janson illustrating and coloring, giving the series a definite Daredevil feel, which helped attract readers familiar with Castle's guest shot in Daredevil #182-#184.

War Journal Entry #209: Solo try-out ran long. Now moving on to more missions. Must atone.
That Batman guy better leggo my idiom.

Punisher — more than a name

To Potts, who guided The Punisher for more than six years, The Punisher was more than a killing machine, extricating justice on wrongdoers. Much more.



War Journal Entry #398: Fought Dr. Doom in crossover. Feel sorry for whoever faced Jigsaw.

"To me, The Punisher is one of those characters who, because he does seem so one-dimensional, is very easy to get wrong," Potts said. "The name 'Punisher' applies not just to what he does but also to himself, as well. He failed to protect his family, they were killed, and now he puts himself in these situations, supposedly by conscious motivation, to take out as much as the criminal class as possible as revenge for his family's death.

"The subconscious desire, though, is to punish himself for failing to protect his family. Every time he goes into a dangerous situation, if he gets hurt or killed, then he's getting his just reward for failing in that task. Microchip, a character Mike Baron created for the ongoing series, had more of an insight into that than Frank himself did."

While Baron's view of The Punisher wasn't dead-on with Potts', it was close enough of a match for Baron to stay with The Punisher through #64. "I saw Frank as an obsessive-compulsive who focused on organized crime as the source of all his — and society's — ills," Baron said. "He became more obsessed through the years and began to identify with the church. He had this whole Catholic guilt thing mixed up with his role as an avenger: The only way he could justify it to himself was to convince himself he was doing the Lord's work. He also suffered from depression. If he'd been on anti-depressants, none of this would have happened!"

Something else Potts said he felt had to come across in the Punisher title (which was rapidly growing into titles) was that Frank Castle never, ever smiled.

"The Punisher never takes pleasure in what he's doing," Potts said. "I remember getting art from people where Frank had this demonic grin on his face as he was mowing through people. What he does never brings pleasure to him. He's doing a job and, when that one is done, he's on to the next one. He either has to take out criminals or be punished by them for failing to protect his family. He never cracks a beer and feels satisfied about a job well done; it's just on to the next one and the one after that and after that. If he has to lie up and heal for a while, it's a forced rest and not something he desires.

"I also wanted to make it clear that what he does never results in any long-term diminishment of criminal activity. Often, he makes matters worse. The fact that he's out there killing criminals often just creates endless revenge cycles, as in Lebanon or the Balkans. He's forging a history of hate that in their minds justifies everyone going after one another."

In Potts' view, while kids and readers could idolize Captain America, they should never have idolized Frank Castle or his life. "Occasionally, I'd get a letter from a younger reader that said, 'I love The Punisher and want to grow up to be just like him,' " Potts said. "No matter what I was doing, I'd stop dead in my tracks and write a letter back and ask if he really wanted to be a miserable, violent person who cures nothing and just hurts people? If he did, then he was missing the point of the story.

"I worried about it, because for every one person who wrote in, there were probably 10 who didn't. The Punisher was not someone to be admired and emulated. This was a pitiful human being we were writing about."

War Journal Entry #379: Busier than ever these days. Seems like I'm appearing everywhere at once. Met the actor playing me in the movie. He should dye his hair.

Pun-mania!

Potts left the Punisher titles around 1989, when he was promoted to Executive Editor, and The Punisher continued to chug along with such writers as Baron, Grant, and Chuck Dixon contributing stories for one, two, or three Punisher titles a month.

Each put his twist on The Punisher, tweaking him just a little to make him fit in their stories, something that moved the character further from Potts' vision.

Consider Dixon's description of The Punisher that he wrote in the early '90s. "Frank was totally amoral," Dixon said. "He was an unreconstructed rogue male. He represented every single negative male trait. The other 'tough' guys were posers. Just like Jokerman says in Full Metal Jacket, they were 'phony tough and crazy brave.' "

But Dixon and others' version of The Punisher continued to sell. During the Punisher mania of the early-to-mid-'90s, dozens of Punisher specials came and went, and, for the most part, Punisher

Punisher PRICE GUIDE

Amazing Spider-Man #129 © 1974 Marvel Comics Group

Punisher Annual #2 © 1989 Marvel Entertainment Group

Along with his own series and spin-offs, The Punisher has made numerous guest appearances in his 25 years. The list below contains the significant ones that are noted in our price guide database. Books collecting story arcs are not included.

The prices given here are for near-mint comics. This is the most acceptable and general condition a collector desires for newer comics. A near-mint copy is almost perfect — with almost no signs of wear or aging. There might be one or two tiny defects discernable only on close examination (for example, an extremely slight flaking on the spine).

The condition of comics is a vital factor in determining comics values. The primary conditions used in grading are "poor" (undesirable in most collections), "fair," "good," "fine," and "mint." Other grades, including the "near-mint" we use, are steps between these. A "fair" issue would be worth about 20% of our price. A "fine" issue would be worth about 60% of our price. And a "mint" copy would be worth 120% of our price.

Back to School Specials, The Punisher Meets Archie, and Punisher/Batman all were solid sellers for Marvel, as were Marvel titles with Punisher guest shots during the period.

War Journal Entry #412: Getting really tired of the battle. Not as much support as before. Good thing I've got my Marvel stock to fall back on.

Punisher backlash

But The Punisher eventually ran up against what every popular character faces: burnout. "The Punisher was not a character that deserved eight (or however many he had) monthly titles," said Joe Quesada, co-founder and co-editor on the "Marvel Knights" imprint. "Some were good, some were not so good, but it's tough to dredge up that much material from one character who in essence was just a vigilante with no super-powers. When the Punisher craze hit, Marvel tried to capitalize on that, as any company would.

"I don't think it hurt the character, but it put too much of a spotlight on him, he ceased to be special, and that was what he had going for him. From where he started out in Spider-Man, he was very, very cool and very special, because we didn't see him that much or know too much about him."

By the mid-'90s, Punisher stories seemed to be as weary and confused as the character himself. After a period of having black skin grafts, The Punisher continued headlong down a path that showed him becoming more and more unstable, eventually convincing himself that he had to kill Nick Fury in Marvel's Double Edge Alpha and Omega.

The frenzied Punisher madness came to a close in July 1995 with the cancellation of The Punisher, The Punisher War Journal, and The Punisher War Zone, only to come back in November with a new series written by John Ostrander which opened with Castle in the electric chair.

"I was asked to submit a proposal for The Punisher, and they asked for something really different," said Ostrander. "I thought I'd give 'em 'different.' Frank Castle becomes the head of a mob family — they'd never go for it. They went for it, and then I realized I actually had to write it."

The series started with a bang but rapidly lost steam resulting in Ostrander's run on it being truncated due to low sales in April 1997. Sales were so low, in fact, that Ostrander finished his Punisher storyline from #17 in Heroes for Hire #9 "They brought him back too early," Ostrander said. "Fans were still a little burned out from all of the Punisher mania we had just gotten over."

His series was canceled, but Frank Castle's strangest odyssey was just to begin.

War Journal Entry #582: Rested and back again with a new mission. Not dead on my feet any more.

What the heck is a la vida loca?

A Castle gets Knighted!

As one of the handful of Marvel heroes scooped up by Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti's "Marvel Knights" deal in 1998, The Punisher was revised as a hero — with controversial results. Writers Tom Sniegoski and Christopher Golden teamed with Bernie Wrightson to tell the tale of the post-suicide Punisher as an undead hitman for Heaven, whose origin was now involved in a guardian angel goofup.

"We needed some sort of change to get people to pay attention to the character again," said Quesada. "Chris and Tom's pitch for The Punisher was just so off the wall, Jimmy and I knew we'd never forgive ourselves, if we didn't go with it."

While the celestial-powered Punisher alienated a few long-time Punisher fans, Quesada said it did have its fans, as well. "It was probably a 70-30 split between people who liked it and those who didn't," Quesada said. "For better or for worse, though, it did put The Punisher on the map again. If we had just come out with a Punisher series that showed him killing the bad guys again in big shoot 'em ups, it probably wouldn't have played, because he'd been doing that for so long. We needed a new drive and motivation and something to bring readers back to the character."

Following his four-issue mini-series, The Punisher teamed with Wolverine in the just concluded four-issue Wolverine/ Punisher: Revelations which, according to Quesada "has blown through the roof on sales."

Castle gets a much-deserved break until next January, when the next "Marvel Knights" Punisher series kicks off: a 12-issue series by the popular team of Garth Ennis and Steve Dillon.

Quesada's still mum on Ennis' second take on The Punisher (he wrote 1995's Punisher Kills the Marvel Universe) but did say that, while the spirit-possession angle of the previous two mini-series may be touched upon, it won't be the focus of the series.

"For The Punisher's second 25 years, Garth and Steve are going to kick it off by doing what they do best," Quesada said. "Twenty-five years is a good start, and I'm happy we'll be carrying The Punisher towards 50."

Attend Evanier's San Diego panels

No time to waste: This year's Comic-Con International convenes in San Diego in just a few weeks. If you can't make it, we'll miss you — and you'll miss some wonderful events, a few of which I'm about to enumerate.

If you can make it, remember the following. There's so much to see, do, and buy in the main exhibit hall that it's easy to forget about the programming. But there's a whole program of panels, interviews, and films going on upstairs, just a short escalator ride away.

"Arnold Drake was the co-creator of two of the best strips of the '60s — Deadman and Doom Patrol, neither of which, in my opinion, survived the loss of his services."

Each year, many once-in-a-lifetime events occur up there. Each year, some of you forget about them. Each year, you later slap yourself repeatedly about the hands and face in an insufficient rage of self-punishment: Stupid, stupid, stupid! Which is only right, because, if you forget, you are stupid, stupid, stupid.

Important note: This is how the schedule stands today, as I e-mail this to press. Things may change. As soon as you arrive, consult your handy program guide and make a list of what you want to see and when it happens. Later, you can always hunt that one issue you're missing of Little Lotta. First things first.

Equally important note: If you see a guy named Charles Brownstein scurrying about, tell him how much you appreciate his splendid coordination of all these wonderful programming events. Good work, Charles!

Thursday afternoon at 1:30, we'll meet and greet Sam Glanzman — a man who has been in comics since shortly after they first crawled out of the primordial ooze.

The earliest work of his I know was for Centaur in 1940, and I'm not sure other jobs didn't precede that. His brother Louis was a key illustrator for Funnies Inc., a firm that provided stories and art for the earliest comics publishers. Thereafter, both Glanzmans worked for almost every company in existence, but Sam seemed notably ubiquitous at Charlton and Dell.

He gained special attention in '64 when Charlton, believing Tarzan had fallen into public domain, launched an unauthorized comic book called Jungle Tales of Tarzan. The Edgar Rice Burroughs estate exploded — what a surprise! — and their lawyers pounded on their chests, gave out with loud apecries, and swung into action. The fourth issue of Charlton's unlicensed adaptation was the last — though rumor has it that a fifth was printed but pulped before distribution. (Has anyone ever seen a copy? I haven't.)

Whatever the legalities, Glanzman's illustrations placed him rightly among the many greats who have drawn Lord Greystoke for comics. Not long after, he drew 13 issues of Hercules for Charlton — a comic book many still consider the best of many funnybook interpretations of the god of the same name.

We've prevailed upon Scott Shaw! to interview Mr. Glanzman for his convention event. ("Prevailed?" Ha! That's like "prevailing" on Al Gore to accept campaign contributions ...) Scott's favorite Glanzman work is Kona, Master of Monarch Isle, a bizarre caveman-'n'-creatures comic book that was published by Dell from 1962 to 1967.

Mine would be U.S.S. Stevens, a series of short autobiographical tales that ran intermittently in DC's combat comics throughout the early '70s. Glanzman wrote and drew remembrances of his time in the Navy, and the result was one of the most "personal" efforts ever done for a company-owned comic book — and maybe the most true-to-life war comic book ever.

Friday morning at 11, we delve into the origins and history of one of comics' most enduring creations. It was in 1941, in the first issue of Military Comics, that Blackhawk made his/their/its debut. (Even when I wrote the comic book, I was never quite certain which it was. Blackhawk is the name of the leader, the squadron, and the strip about them, making for what this century's outstanding semanticist, Daffy Duck, once termed "pronoun trouble.")

I don't know that we'll settle that mystery, but all others will likely be resolved, including some confusion as to who created the thing: Will Eisner or Chuck Cuidera. We'll have both those gents on the panel, recalling whatever they recall from the strip's inception.

Will Eisner, you all know. If ever a man needed no introduction in a publication about comic books ...

Chuck Cuidera has, alas, been away from comics since around '71 — our loss, for he was one of the best. Many talented artists drew Blackhawk, including Reed Crandall, Bill Ward, and Dick Dillin, but Cuidera more than anyone else was responsible for the look 'n' feel, not just of that title, but of much of the Quality Comics line. (Credit for locating Mr. Cuidera and enticing him to attend his first San Diego soirée should go, as usual, to David Siegel, Finder of Lost Pros.)

Put them together and you have the definitive Blackhawk panel. With a whole lotta steadfast Blackhawk fans packing the place.

Friday afternoon at 3:30, I get to interview one of my favorite comic-book writers. Arnold Drake was the co-creator of two of the best strips of the '60s — Deadman and Doom Patrol, neither of which, in my opinion, survived the loss of his services.

The Doom Patrol made its debut in My Greatest Adventure #80, which, by some calculations, made it to newsstands about three weeks before the first issue of X-Men by Stan Lee and Jack Kirby. The timing is interesting, since the two comics reek of similarities. Both concerned unusually powered people who were regarded as human abnormalities. Both groups were assembled by a genius confined to a wheelchair — assembled in the hope they would use their powers for good against other abnormal folks who used theirs for malevolence.

Both had strong male leads whose faces were hidden because of their destructive powers: The Doom Patrol's Negative Man was swathed in bandages; the X-Men's Cyclops wore dark glasses. (Inspiration for the latter — and maybe even the letter "X" — apparently came from the Ray Milland movie, X – the Man with X-Ray Eyes.)

The Doom Patrol battled The Brotherhood of Evil. The X-Men battled The Brotherhood of Evil Mutants. Still, insofar as I can tell, no one involved with either title alleges plagiarism in either direction.

Bob Haney co-wrote the first story; thereafter, Arnold soloed on scripts, with art by Bruno Premiani and, occasionally, Bob Brown. The result was, I thought, the best-written DC super-hero title of its day. Fans then said that Marvel had superior characterization and continuity, and, to some extent, that was true — but it wasn't true insofar as Doom Patrol was concerned. (Another worthy contender in that area was Haney's Metamorpho.)

Deadman was my favorite comic-book series for a very short time. Drake wrote the first two in Strange Adventures, then others took over and eventually steered it down odd avenues: a good example, perhaps, of too many chefs, each working a different recipe. (He actually wrote three stories, but the third wasn't used. Remind me to ask him about it ...)

He also wrote Bob Hope, Jerry Lewis, Challengers of the Unknown, and many others for DC. Later on, he worked briefly for Marvel and did a long stint for Western Publishing, writing Little Lulu, Star Trek, and oodles of those Boris Karloff-Twilight Zone comics.

I particularly loved five issues of Showcase he wrote for DC (#41, #42, #44, #46, and #47) that featured Tommy Tomorrow. I thought it was one of the best-scripted comics I ever read and I was disappointed that it did not become an ongoing title.

This event is highly recommended to those of you who are interested in the history of DC in the '50s and '60s, including the famed "Writers' Rebellion." Arnold was there and displays a Gillette-honed memory for the particulars. He's also a wonderful, witty gentleman.

Saturday at noon — and remember, some of these times may change — we celebrate 60 years of Batman and remember Bob Kane. Present at the front table will be Batman Editor (and Living Legend) Julius Schwartz, longtime Batman artist Irv Novick, and two gents who actually drew oodles of Batman tales signed with the Kane byline, Sheldon Moldoff and Jerry Robinson.

It's a thrill to get Jerry Robinson back to San Diego, because he was a vital contributor, not only to the Caped Crusader but to the essential form of comic books and strips.

He was 17 when Kane hired him as an assistant. Before long, Jerry was drawing Batman stories and covers on his own accord, and some say that he created The Joker and Robin. (Mr. Kane had a different viewpoint ...)

In the '50s, Robinson became a teacher at Cartoonist's and Illustrator's School (one of his prize students was Steve Ditko) and worked for Atlas-Marvel and elsewhere. He soon segued to newspaper strips, including the witty Still Life, and served as president of the National Cartoonists' Society and also the Association of American Political Cartoonists.

In the '70s, he was highly instrumental, along with Neal Adams and others, in obtaining a pension from DC for Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster. And, boy, I wish I had more room to itemize the awards he's won, the books he's written, and all the projects he's done to better the life and image of cartoonists in this country.

No two people alive can supply more authoritative info on Bob Kane and the early days of Batman than Jerry Robinson and Sheldon Moldoff. This is one you won't want to miss.

Saturday afternoon at 3 is the tentative slot for this year's annual Golden-Silver Age Artists Panel. As ever, we gather veteran comics illustrators and compare and contrast their views of the industry's earlier days. This year, we will welcome to the dais, in alphabetical order:

Chuck Cuidera, of whom you have just heard.

Ramona Fradon, the outstanding artist behind dozens of Aquaman comics and the first half-dozen or so appearances of Metamorpho.

Sam Glanzman, of whom you have just heard.

Irwin Hasen, whom I'll tell you about in a moment.

Jerry Robinson, of whom you have just heard.

John Romita Sr., long-time Marvel artist and Art Director. (By the way: If a magic genie told me I could draw like any comic-book artist in history, I'd probably say I wanted to draw like Johnny Romita. Of course, that would mean I couldn't earn a living, because I'd just sit home all day, drawing pictures of sexy women for my own enjoyment. But it would be a nice way to perish ...)

These panels are always fun and informative, and I think that's all I need to say about this one.

Sunday morning at 11, attention must be paid to the incredible career of Irwin Hasen, one of our great comic book-and-strip storytellers.

Many of you know Irwin from the years he spent as the illustrator of the Dondi newspaper strip. Before that, he was one of the best artists of the so-called "Golden Age" of super-hero comics — one whose work was avidly admired and aped by other professionals. He drew The Fox, Green Lantern, The Green Hornet, and — especially — the Wildcat feature that ran in All-American Comics.

You know how artists are always saying that Alex Toth is the guy to study? Well, Hasen was one of the guys Toth studied!

In 1955, Dondi took him away from comic books. And, while a newspaper strip rarely affords its artist much free time, he managed to do a great deal of art instruction, particularly in the finer — often, these days, neglected — craft of graphic storytelling.

I spent an hour with Mr. Hasen at a Mid-Ohio-Con a few years ago and learned plenty. I don't think you can listen to Irwin Hasen talk about comics and not learn plenty. Pop in for his spotlight and see if you don't agree.

Sunday afternoon at 12:30, we assemble for "The Cosmic Art of Jack Kirby." Each year, the con sets aside a moment to recall the man that some call the all-time greatest comics creator. This time, we focus on Kirby the Artist, particularly in his late-Marvel-early-DC period, when he was perhaps his most innovative and most influential.

As this barrels off to press, the participants in this event aren't set — but I'll be chairing a panel of prominent artists who'll be discussing Jack's graphic advances and what his drawing meant to them. Check the program book, see whom we've snagged, then rush to the room, and grab a seat.

Those are the Golden/Silver Age panels for this year. Now, I'm going to plug a few others ...

I am a Guest of Honor this year. I have no idea why this is, since I'm there every year, anyway — this one will make it 30 out of 30 — and on 97 panels. But a GoH I am, and that means there will be a program on my alleged career. It's Thursday at 4, and, if anyone shows, I'll try to tell some anecdotes that are too libelous or racy for this column.

Slightly more explicable, Sergio Aragonés is also a Guest of Honor.

Our constant collaborations will be dissected and/or discussed on a panel with him, me, Stan Sakai, and Tom Luth. We have also invited Scott Allie — the latest in a long line of Groo editors — so that he and I can try to figure out what each other does on the series. Anyway, that one's Friday at 1:30 in the afternoon, and, if anyone's hungry, maybe we'll send out for pizza.

June Foray is also a Guest of Honor this year, and that, at least, makes sense. June Foray is the closest thing we have to royalty in the world of Cartoon Voices. She's known for playing Rocky the Flying Squirrel and a cast of thousands in Jay Ward's cartoons and for playing Granny (owner of Tweety) for the classic Warner Brothers shorts and the current Sylvester and Tweety Mysteries. Those two gigs constitute about 3% of all she's done.

She's one busy lady. There's a Rocky & Bullwinkle feature film in the works — with Robert DeNiro as Fearless Leader, no less! And, later this year, she will be honored, as a star bearing her name is installed along the fabled Hollywood Walk of Fame. My buddy Earl Kress will be host of a special spotlight on her work on Friday afternoon at the con. Yet another good presentation not to miss.

June will also appear on our annual Cartoon Voice Actor Panel, which is Saturday afternoon at 1:30. Joining her to demonstrate the fine art of speaking for animated characters will be Joe Alaskey (The Sylvester and Tweety Mysteries, Rugrats), Greg Berg (Muppet Babies, The Simpsons), Tom Kenny (SpungeBob SquarePants, Catdog, Dilbert), Katie Leigh (Dungeons and Dragons, Richie Rich), and Will Ryan (The Little Mermaid, The Land before Time).

OK, outta room. End of infomercial. Hope to see you all in San Diego. And, by the way, if you expect to get a parking space at the convention center, you'd better leave now.

Mark Evanier gets his mail at PMB 303, 363 S. Fairfax Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90036-3124, and on the 'net at me@evanier.com.

Fan Satire. Fanboy is, of course, an in-group joke series. No one but a pretty hep funnybook fan can understand a lot of the gags. But the fourth issue ventures beyond in-group comedy. There's the usual crackling Mark Evanier verbal humor and the usual Sergio Aragonés sight gags galore — the sort of shenanigans we've grown to know and love from Groo to shining Groo.

Evanier makes us realize that there's something inherently wrong with a justice system in which plea bargaining works only if you plead guilty, and then you go free; if you plead not guilty, chances are, you serve time. (This is a contradiction in terms, Aristotle — just in case you weren't watching closely.) And Sergio gives the running gag about the sleazy comic-book store owner a visual boost by picturing the guy as a fat old fraud, bald except for frizzy hair around the edges, in the ever-present grease-stained T-shirt who eats junk food by the vat. (How many of these guys have you seen, and what do you think they're selling?)

But this issue gets down to business when it turns the spotlight on censorship. When Finster hooks up with Sgt. Rock and Easy Company, they visit a German town where the Nazis are busy burning books. The historical reference underscores the evil inherent in shutting down comic-book stores because of parents who (always and forevermore in every time and place) disapprove of the things their offspring wear, do, listen to, and read. And a Fredric Wertham simulacrum shows up, too, in the person of Dr. Zensie ("zensie," Mark tells me, is German for "censor," German being Wertham's native tongue, which left him with a distinctly Teutonic accent, a fact that did not fail to excite some comment in the post-WWII era in which Wertham was testifying).

Apart from its satiric edge, Fanboy is also an astonishing testament to the power of the medium that we accept so readily pictures by such realistic artists as Jordi Bernet and Russ Heath through which our hero Finster ambles in all his bigfoot finery (or bignose finery, to cite that part of his anatomy that is carefully preserved from each of these Evaniverses to the other). Finster clearly "lives" in our imaginations, whether in jail with Bernet's ghoulish cell-dwellers or on the battlefield with Heath's Sgt. Rock — and vice versa.

Marie Severin's segment highlights Bill Gaines' testimony before the so-called Kefauver Committee investigating comic books as a cause of juvenile delinquency. Gaines is quoted exactly (if not extensively): "What are we afraid of? Are we afraid of our own children? Do we think our children are so evil and simple-minded that it only takes a story of murder to set them to murder?"

I read this during the week following the slaughter at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., and the juxtaposition jolted. But, even as our self-serving politicians race to enact legislation against being an adolescent, we must recall the rest of the Gaines cautionary tale: Evanier tells us the Comics Code Authority came into being after the Senate hearings, but he doesn't mention that, as a result of applying the Code stringently, all juvenile delinquency disappeared from the land overnight. He doesn't mention it because it didn't happen. It didn't happen, probably, because comic books don't, actually, cause juvenile delinquency, so "cleaning" them up didn't eliminate criminal behavior. Not then, not now.

SOLUTION!

SIZE DOES MATTER

Bigger than the AVALANCHE, BIGGER THAN GODZILLA

THIS IS THE BIGGEST & SIMPLEST CATALOGUE IN THE WORLD

85%+ of Marvels & DC's published after 1982 $1.00@, more...

We did it again. We bought yet another 100 000 book inventory with no propects of cataloguing it until we get through our current, already overwhelming schedule of updates. As our regular customers know, our latest cycle of catalogues is far behind schedule. But these new arrivals are in alpha-numerical order , they are predominantly Fine or better, and the inventory is fairly complete from 1982-1995 .. so we're BLOWING EM OUT you want SPECTRE 1-50, WEB 1-200, Superman 420-500, Jon Sable 1-50? or selected issues of any of these such as Web 12,17,52,56,57 etc)? Just list & count 'em at $1.00 , and you're on your way. Yes we have pulled some of the more expensive books and our regular customers have been hacking away for a month already so, it is not recommended that you base an order on break outs & higher price books. But the vast majority of Marvels, DC, & Indies from 1982 & up are available (incl many books with guide values of $5.00-$10.00) for you to order at fine or better at a buck a book.. , Alternates are recommended & REQUIRED for ..

ORDERING IS SIMPLE

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $43.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($43.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or symbols to Trader ads. The better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

But I Digress

ent lack of imagination in the character's fundamental make-up: He goes around with a big skull on his chest and shoots and kills criminals. Wow.

It wouldn't have been as bad, if he had remained what I always thought was his best role in the Marvel universe: supporting character and/or occasional villain for Spider-Man. But for the most part, he was sort of Batman without the wit or originality. I thought Punisher 2099 was actually a more interesting take on the concept (although, admittedly, Jake Gallows was a far more abysmal name than Frank Castle).

As noted, there were some great Punisher stories. I thought the limited series kicked serious butt, and, when I first saw Die Hard, Bruce Willis looked so much as if he'd been drawn by Mike Zeck that I felt that Willis would be far more suited to play the character than Dolph Lundgren ever would. (Then, again, a plate of zucchini would be more suited to play any role than Dolph Lundgren.) And Jo Duffy, the hardest-working man in comics, certainly showed an affinity for The Punisher and turned out nifty tales. By and large, though, the character still leaves me cold.

Perhaps, ultimately, it's the name. I mean, it's really a misnomer, isn't it? He doesn't punish anyone, does he? Not really. I mean, Batman looks like a bat. Superman really is super, Spider-Man has that whole spider thing going. "Punishment" implies, at least to me, a penalty with a lesson attached, an implicit, "Learn from this punishment and never, ever do it again." But, if the Punisher is really punishing people, then the people he's punishing should be getting something out of it somehow. He should be applying some sort of penalty that would serve as a warning for people who have erred in their behavior so they wouldn't do such things again.

That's kind of difficult, though, when all he leaves behind him is a string of corpses. A dead criminal can't exactly say, "Whoops, my bad. I've certainly learned my lesson and will never engage in such dastardly behavior again."

He doesn't punish. He just executes. He destroys. Except you can't call him The Executioner or The Destroyer because, whoops, you'll have a bit of a legal problem on your hands.

Ultimately, the only one he was really punishing was himself. Instead of coming to terms with the death of his family and moving on, he punished himself for not being able to save them by turning himself into a soulless killing machine with no life other than death.

Might be an interesting way to go with him, if he were being played for high tragedy, but mostly he was just played for carnage (except for the brief, ill-advised period where he was capping jay walkers).

Actually, I was always kind of fond of what Jo Duffy (I think it was Jo) saw as the final, logical Punisher story: a future wherein he has actually managed to blow away every single criminal, and there is no more crime anywhere. At which point the Punisher announces, "There's only one criminal left," and blows his own brains out. I guess, at heart, that's my most fundamental problem with him.

The Punisher, in trying to do away with that which he despised, became what he despised. He was as much a criminal, if not more so, as those he was chasing. Batman chased criminals — but used tools of ingenuity and, ultimately, mercy. He elevated himself above the muck and mire in order to reach down, like a cloaked right hand of God, and take out the bad guys.

He didn't say, "Criminals are a superstitious, cowardly lot ... so I must become superstitious and cowardly." But The Punisher unrelentingly threw himself right into the muck with those he was trying to destroy. And, as the old saying goes, when you lie down with pigs, you get up smelling like a pig. He wasn't a dark reflection of that which he was fighting; he was that which he was fighting.

In fact, he was less interesting. Because the criminals were capable of having lives outside of crime. They could have a wife, children, hobbies, other endeavors, fully rounded existences. The Punisher existed to kill, and that was pretty much it. Not only was he as bad as that which he fought, he was also less interesting, almost by definition.

If nothing else, he served as the ultimate reminder of how obsession with anything is not a good thing. Ironic, then, that The Punisher would be a hero, not because of what he inspires us to do — but instead what he inspires us not to do.

Read a bee-auty

Clan Apis #5 (of 5). Written and drawn by Jay Hosler. Active Synapse Comics, 1531 Presidential Dr., Columbus, OH 43212. (Apr 99, black and white, $2.95)

This mini-series is for kids, but be warned: The copy that came into the office is no longer in Mint condition, because there's a big wet teardrop spot on the last page — so be careful when you read, if you're trying to preserve this for investment purposes.

For that matter, one of the best uses to which you can put this mini-series is to hand it to kids for their delight, understanding, and schooling. (And kids are certainly going to wear this out with rereading.)

Hosler should wear an identification badge reading, "Has deep bee knowledge." Bees actually are his scientific specialty. But the guy known to many CBG readers as the creator of Cow-Boy is a cartoonist, as well, and he's come up with a magnificent sample of the best in educational entertainment.

His heroine is pollen-gatherer Nyuki, and, as the issue begins, she is clearly nearing the end of what she can do for the hive. But Hosler does far more than simply chronicle the life of a worker. Now that it's completed, his mini-series deserves wider circulation and preservation as a hardcover for generations of readers to come.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last-minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

STANDARD ADVERTISING POLICY:

A. All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions outlined below. The publisher reserves the right to omit or decline advertising, or suspend advertising privileges, for any reason, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such omission, declination of suspension of advertising privileges. Accepting payment does not constitute ad acceptance. The publiser reserves the right to decline advertising at any time.

B. Each advertisement will stand on its own size to determine the rate charged. The grouping of several advertisements, to earn a lower rate is prohibited. Advertisers may not share contracted space with another party to earn a lower rate.

C. All ads typeset by Krause Publications shall be retained by and remain the property of Krause Publications. Camera ready ads and/or illustrations provided by the advertiser shall be returned upon request.

D. Krause Publications is not responsible for any items delivered or sent to our offices to be photographed for use in an ad. Advertisers are strongly encouraged to send their own photographs.

E. The placement of an ad is automatically subject to all rates and conditions in the rate card.

F. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on the order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions, which conflict with the publisher's policies.

G. All advertising is subject to the publisher's approval. The publisher reserves the right to edit advertising copy, artwork and format to conform with standard advertising policies. Ad copy with reference to another party without written consent is strictly prohibited.

H. This publication does not guarantee, and disclaims all knowledge of, the right of seller or buyer to contract. Specific inquiries should be made on questions of minority or ownership.

I. Advertisers and advertising agencies concerned assume liability for all content (including test representations and illustrations) of advertisements printed and also assume responsiblity for any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain apppropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in the advertisement.

J. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, fires, act of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publiser assumes no responsiblity for misprints or claims and actions by the advertisers.

K. Advertisements offering prizes, grab bags or contests of any nature, are not acceptable unless prior written approval has been obtained from the United States Postal Service, Washington, D.C.

L. Ads canceled after published deadline will be charged.

M. Copy running longer than the space ordered will be cut from the end of the listing at the discretion of the publisher.

N. An advertiser who cashes a check or charges a credit or charges a credit card has entered into a binding agreement to deliver that merchandise at the advertised price.

O. Unless stated otherwise in the ad, the buyer has a 10-day return privilege from the time he/she receives an item from an advertiser. The buyer does not have to give a reason for a return and can demand a refund less postage cost. Advertisers must allow buyers to obtain authenticity judgements as the basis for retention provided they notify the advertiser in writing of their intent within the applicable return privilege period. The buyer can request, but not demand, a replacement. If the buyer requests it, the seller must refund the purchase price rather than issue a credit or exchange. When, in the sole judgement of the publisher's staff, the seller delivers overgraded material in an attempt to force the buyer to seek a refund, the publisher reserves the right to demand that the seller deliver properly graded material or make a refund in an amount determined by the publisher to be commensurate with the current market.

P. Merchandise returned must be in the same condition it was sent. In the event of a return, the seller may request that the entire order rather than a portion be returned for a refund.

Q. Unless delayed delivery is specified in the ad, the buyer may request an immediate refund if delivery is not made within 30 days after seller accepts payment. When delayed delivery is specified in the ad, but the stated period passes without delivery, the buyer may request an immediate refund. This policy takes precedence over any terms or conditions which may appear in any advertisement. When, in the opinion of the publisher, delayed delivery is being used to avoid fulfilling an order for available merchandise on which the market value has risen, the publisher reserves the right to alter the amount of refund due and enforces it immediate remittal to the buyer.

R. Advertisers who are in violation of these or any other Krause Publication advertising policies may be subject to penalties included, but not limited to, suspension or revocation of advertising privileges, at the sole discretion of the publisher.

S. The publisher's staff reserves the right to - without prior notice - suspend application of these policies, to amend any policy, or to create any new policy which in its sole opinion will facilitate fair play in a specific transaction or among the hobby in general.

There are two characters in comics whom I have written and never want to take another try at. This isn't to say that the characters are necessarily bad or that other writers with a far greater affinity for them couldn't produce cracking good stories for them. Indeed, writers whose work I have nothing but respect for have done exactly that. Nevertheless, I personally have no affinity for the characters whatsoever.

"Believe it or not, I had The Punisher kick open the back door of the van he was hiding in, announce, "You've just crapped out," and open fire."

The first is Lobo.

I realized this, with some degree of alarm, when I had already made plans to have him guest-star in Aquaman. I found that, although I was able to plot a story in which he was involved, once I got to the scripting stage, I couldn't get into his head at all. For me, that made composition of his dialogue tedious, bordering on impossible. Fans seemed pretty much accepting of my take on the character, so I imagine I didn't leave too many people bitterly disappointed. Nevertheless, I felt out of touch with him; I felt as if I were scripting him from a great distance. I just couldn't relate to him in any way, shape, or form and so felt utterly out of touch. As a result, I felt that my work on him had a rote, by-the-numbers feel and vowed to steer clear of him from that point on.

The other is The Punisher.

I've wound up handling the character four times, and only once did I really have any fun.

The first two occasions are hazy to me. Believe it or not, there are many comics I barely remember, even though I wrote them. This will come, I know, as a major shock to fans, who apparently believe that writers possess an encyclopedic knowledge of every comic book ever produced with our name on it.

I remember once when a friend and I walked into a comics store and — frankly, to my mortification, because I just went in to buy comics, not get an ego boost — my friend informed the store owners who I was. The proprietors didn't believe my friend's claims and started asking me trivia questions about my career. They stumped me in two seconds flat. How the hell was I supposed to know the number of my first issue of Dreadstar? (And I just know that there are people reading this who know that bit of information off the top of their head.) So I'd appreciate your patience with my hazy memory on the subject.

My first involvement with The Punisher came when an editor asked me to contribute a 10-pager or something like that to a Punisher annual. I tried to figure out how I could do a story that would somehow be unusual and finally hit on something a little different: It would be a story where The Punisher winds up not killing anybody. In order to try to turn the formula around, the Punisher winds up owing his life to a criminal and, consequently, has trouble with his intended mission.

My second go-around with The Punisher, I have even less recollection of. It was a full-length story, it was another annual, it had something to do with a big crossover and, I think, a computer virus, and I was assigned to take it on because at that time different Marvel comic books had been grouped into "families."

There were the Spider-Man family, the X-Men family, the Avengers family, and so on. The Punisher, along with The Hulk and other titles, had been grouped into what could best be termed the Outcast family. The comics had no strong association with other titles, so Marvel lumped these disparate titles together and tried to say that the fact that they had nothing whatsoever to do with each other was, in fact, the tie that bound. Which was nonsense, of course, but try to argue with editorial dictate. (God knows I have.)

So that particular year, they had all the writers of the Outcast titles (for want of a better phrase) round robin on the annuals, and I — lucky duck — got Punisher. I think I've blanked the story out of my mind. Certainly, no one's had me autograph the stupid thing in about 10 years, so it's not uppermost in my memory banks. And one other time he showed up later in my run on The Hulk during a crossover storyline wherein the Punisher was running amuck in New York. But that was the second time I used him in Hulk. The first time was also the only time I got any amusement value out of The Punisher, because I played him for laughs.

For years during my run, fans begged me to do a Hulk vs. Punisher story. I tried to explain to them that the notion of Hulk vs. Punisher was inherently absurd, because the power levels of the characters were so disparate. Basically, I would say, Punisher fighting The Hulk would go something like this: The Punisher keeps shooting until he's out of ammunition, at which point The Hulk hits him. End of fight. I didn't really see a lot of room for give-and-take there. Not exactly one of the more see-saw battles one could come up with.

In any event, it was during my run with the marvelous Dale Keown. Before Dale had come on board, I'd done a series of stories in which The Hulk was spending his time as a leg-breaker in Las Vegas, going under the name "Mr. Fixit." My artist at the time, Jeff Purves, was a very talented penciller, but somehow he never quite got Mr. Fixit right, and as a consequence the stories were never as good as they could have been. Jeff's real strength was fantasy realms: Case in point, we did a two-parter set in Jarella's world, and his pencils looked stupendous. He begged me to do a whole year's worth of stories there, having finally gotten plots that were smack in his element. The Fixit stories, I think, never really moved him.

Dale, on the other hand, was a more versatile artist, and, while we were on a Hulk promotional tour (back when Marvel did promotional tours) that took us through Las Vegas, I suggested to Dale that we do a two-parter set in America's premiere gambling nirvana. He readily agreed and did sketches for reference while we were out there. We then embarked on the planned two-parter, and Dale just nailed "Mr. Fixit" the moment The Hulk appeared on panel in his pin-striped suit. I looked at the pencil pages and shouted, "Yes! Yes! That's what he looks like!"

I also decided that, since we were doing a story involving criminals in Las Vegas, it was the appropriate environment to bring in The Punisher, finally, as per the unceasing fan requests. And I staged the battle exactly as I said I would.

The Punisher — initially unaware that he's firing on the Hulk — lets rip with heavy-duty weaponry in an effort to cut down the formidable Mr. Fixit where he stands. (Although The Punisher's entrance line was edited out. Believe it or not, I had The Punisher kick open the back door of the van he was hiding in, announce, "You've just crapped out," and open fire. I was told I couldn't have him say, "crapped out." Even though they were in Las Vegas, even though it was a gambling term, even though it had nothing whatsoever to do with excrement, they still wouldn't let me use the phrase.)

So The Hulk slowly advances on him, his nice suit being shredded but otherwise not being slowed in the least. He draws to within a foot of The Punisher, reaches out, crushes his machine gun, looms over him as only The Hulk (and possibly Jim Shooter) can loom, and rumbles, "No. Don't say anything. I want to remember you like this." And then he hits him, although we didn't actually see it.

That, and the conclusion of the two-parter, was my involvement with The Punisher.

I know The Punisher had a ton of fans there for a while, particularly during the heady boom-and-bust days a few years ago. I will never forget the Marvel editor who stomped around the office all unhappy because the first issue of Punisher War Journal had sold only half a million copies. Only half a million copies. God, those were the days.

Why did I never really warm to the character? Perhaps it was the ruthlessly imitative nature of the origin. "Let's do The Executioner, let's do Death Wish in a comic book." Perhaps it was the inher-
